

Heejin Lee
448 8th Avenue
San Francisco CA 94118

Sep 5th 2018

Via ECFS
Marlene H. Dortch, Secretary
Federal Communications Commission
445 12th Street, S.W.
Washington, D.C. 20554

Re: In the Matter of Petition of USTelecom for Forbearance Pursuant to 47 U.S.C. Section 160(c); WC Docket No. 18-141; Category 1

Dear FCC,

I chose a competitive provider (Sonic), because the large telecom providers provide absolutely terrible service. They annually increase their prices for the same poor service. I live in San Francisco, and AT&T requests me to pay more for 50mbps vs Sonic who can provide me with 1gbps at a cheaper price. This lack of competition would be a major disadvantage to US companies. Our society is becoming more dependent on the internet. By having corporations stifle our access to it, and provide unworthy, slow service, this would hinder the growth of US businesses who's day to day work depends on reliable, fast internet. Stifling competition would put Americans at the mercy of terrible internet service. It is unfair to put our country's businesses behind those of foreign nations, due to bad telecom providers. Furthermore, the advancement in internet technology is largely due to competition. If it were not for local providers, 1 gb speeds would still be a dream in the United States. The death of net neutrality is a huge step backwards for the US and already a vastly unpopular decision in the country. Do not make another mistake.

Heejin Lee